

“I
KNOW HOW IT FEELS ...

to fool yourself into believing you're okay.”
